With Trump winning back the White House, tech billionaire Elon Musk is almost certain to play a pivotal role in the incoming administration. As the crypto market rallies on the news, one of the tokens that has benefited the most is Musk's favourite crypto, Dogecoin, which soared 24% as the Republican candidate moved closer to victory.

Musk has a long history of influencing the price of Dogecoin. In May 2021, following several endorsements from the billionaire, including an SNL skit in which he referred to himself as 'Doge father', the coin's market capitalisation reached an all-time high of $88 billion. Dogecoin is currently the eighth largest cryptocurrency with a market cap of over $28 billion.

Dogecoin enthusiasts see Trump's victory as a big win for this memecoin, as it means there is likely to be more news about Musk and his proposed Department of Government Efficiency, whose DOGE acronym is an obvious reference to the coin. Therefore, we list DOGE as one of the best meme coins for Canadian investors to buy in this December.

The following sets forth the DOGE to USD Chart.

Conclusion

Without a doubt, Trump's shift from crypto sceptic to enthusiastic supporter is the catalyst everyone's been waiting for. The crypto market is on fire with Donald Trump's return to the US presidency. Amid the current bull run cycle, Bitcoin shot past its all-time high to break the $100K milestone for the first time.

Best of all, the meme coin market is widely expected to catch up rapidly. In a favourable environment, we are confident that investing in Pepe (PEPE), Floki Inu (FLOKI), dogwifhat (WIF) and Dogecoin (DOGE) is the right choice for Canadian traders looking to make huge profits.

However, as the primary significance of meme coins is rooted in their association with meme culture, instead of possessing inherent value or a specific purpose, these coins are notably prone to price fluctuations. Therefore, traders are advised to be well-informed and cautious before making any investment choice.
